What Armour Lines Are Doing. What Armour Lines Are Doing.
I had a long talk to-day with Mr. J.
A. Brown, of Chadbourn, N. C., a man who may be looked upon as a ploneer in the culture of berries and small fruits in North Carolina. Years ago he recognized the possibilities of this industry in the old North State, and he is primarily responsible for the colony around Chadbourn, which furnishes the greater portion of the strawberries shipped from the eastern part of North Carotina. He is the president of the bank lina. He is the president of the bank located at Chadbourn to assist in the de-greater portion of the state of the bank ped from the eastern part of North Carolina. He is the president of the bank located at Chadbourn to assist in the development of this region, and he is a prime mover in inducing immigrants to come to his section, in locating them when they come, and in advancing them the funds necessary to start the development of the property on which they settle. A thousand fertile and fruitful berry fields surrounding the little town of Chadbourn, attest the soundness of the policy pursued, and the personnel of the colony, including New Englanders and men from Michigan, Illinois and other Western and Middle States, bespeak the quality of the growers, a study population, which will be heard from further in the development of North Carolina.

It was Mr. Brown's estimate of the losses recently incurred by the berry growers that attracted so much attention, and was quoted before the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce as an argument against the private car lines, "I wish to set the public right on this matter," said Mr. Brown to-day. "I have been quoted as saying that the loss to the berry growers of North Carolina this season would amount to $400,000, and that the whole loss should be laid at the door of the Armour car lines. That is not correct; the estimate includes all losses of every character, due to had weather, inferient car service, and delay in gelting the fruit to market. I should say that at least $200,000 of the loss resulted from bad weather. I must say the Armour car lines did something no other company ever did. They came forward voluntarily and offered to pay for the daminates I struck sh average of two dollars are incurred because of their inability to supply cars for the transportation of the fruit. I called in twenty leading growers and requested them to estimate the value of the berries lost through the delay. They made liner estimates separately and secretly. From these estimates a crate, and on that estimate the Armour people are paying us for the losses for wh iness. They found the bid of the Armours the lowest.

"We started out with the freight and refrigeration rates at $1.98 a crate," said Mr. Brown, "almost as much as the berries bring now in the New York market. The rate went down to about a dollar a crate, and it is now $0 cents. The refrigeration charge is 22 1-2 cents for a crate of 32 quarts, or, approximately two-thirds of a cent a quart. Does it pay? Of course, it pays. Without refrigeration we could not sell our berries at all. I do not believe the charges will ever be excessive. When the refrigeration car lines get to charging too nuch we will go out of business and they will get no freights at all. As long as they are reasonable in their charges we ship, and both of us profit. When they get to taking all the profit, we will quit shipping. Why should they kill the business by overcharging?"

charging?"
Mr. Brown is very optimistic regarding the future of the berry growing industry in Eastern North Carolina, and is now on in Eastern North Carolina, and the his way to New York to further interest capital in this industry which, within a few years, has been built up from nothing to two thousand cars a year.

Ing of the parliament in those cities.

Call on President.

The parliament was thrown into disorder at the morning session over the question of the adoption of a resolution introduced by W. A. Irwin, of Durham, N. C., calling upon President Roosevelt, to lend his aid through the Department of Commerce and Labor, in relieving the present depressing conditions surrounding the cotton industry. Delegates bitterly protested against a motion by Secretary Murphy to posipone action on all resolutions until the next meeting of the parliament and charged that an effort was being made to Eag the members and sidetrack important matters. The motion was voted down and after a stormy debate, the parliament recessed until the afternoon in order that the delegates might call upon President Roosevelt.

The programme called for the reading of several papers bearing on the minuracturing interests of the South, but Mr. Irwin was recognized to address the body upon his resolution. He said that he had been unable to secure a meeting of the Committee on Manufactures to consider it. The cotton question, he declared, was a vital one to the parliament and cotton milling could not be sidetracked in interest, to the country. He inquired if the question was to be ignored. The Bouth needed help, he said, at this time, and the parliament was here to call for help. Eulogizes Roosevelt.

will, to help. The South, he said, needed something else besides imitigration of labor, and that was to encourage and extend the marts of the world cotton manufactured goods. But, what was needed more than anything else, was the guarding of the trade already established in the Orient, and which now seemed to be threatened with dire disaster on account of the present laws prevailing in this country. Further commending the President, Mr. Irwin said he was a man who had a way of doing things, "and," he added, amid more applause, "he is our President of the South, as well as he added, amid more applause, "he is our President of the South, as well as the North, or the East, or the West, and to him, we are looking for help." A number delegates interrupted and expressed their willingness to leave the solution of the question in the President's bends.

hands.

Several other members protested that the paramount question in the South that of cotton, had been totally neglected by the parliament. I. E. Brown. of North Carolina, insisted that some system should be devised by which the values of cotton should be made stable. The resolutions reported by the Committee on Resolutions were not read, but the Irwin resolution was as follows:

The President Endorsed.

"Resolved, That this industrial parliament now in session memorializes the President of this great nation, Honorable Theodore Roesevelt, commending his zeal in pressing forward the construction of the Isthmian Canal, which, we are pro-foundly convinced, promises incalculable ald in the extension and upuuliding our export trade for cotton manufactures and other products of the industrial enter-prises of this country, and bids him God speed in the full completion and successful operation of this prodigious successful operation of this plougicus enterprise;

"Resolved, That we here and now appeal to our President, Honorable Theodore Roosevelt, to promptly inaugurate, through the new Department of Commerce and Labor, or whatever channels his wisdom elects immediate efforts to relieve the depressing condition existing in the important and tremendous industry of cotton milling in this country by encouraging, broadening and expanding our markets for our cotton and other manufactured products;

"Resolved, further, That Senator F, M, Simmons, of North Carolina, be and is hereby appointed a committee of one to
